BORN

The darkness was swallowed by a boom of light, that was the first time I cried.

I was living inside my mother but I still missed her, and now that she hugged me without knowing my move I just kissed her.

It was very common to hear my father's voice in that dark place, but now looking at his expression is completely different case.

All the people around me were talking some with sorrow and some with pity, as there was one more unsafe girl born in the city!
